Jobless Government Girls Don't Want to Go Home

WASHINGTON.—Most of the government girls being thrown out of work by federal budget cuts don't want to go home if they can help it.

At least that's what they tell their personnel advisers at Arlington Farms, federal housing project for nearly 4,000 G-girls, and at the navy and war departments.

Furthermore, many of them say they have enough money to keep them going during a few weeks of job-hunting here.

"We are amazed at the way these girls have prepared for this situation," the personnel workers agreed. "They are showing that they can take it."

Personnel counsellors are confident there will be no repetition of the problem which arose after the last war.

Then Bernard Baruch and other philanthropists had to finance the return home of many penniless government girls.

A handful of recently discharged government girls already have found work here in private industry. Many are working out their dismissal notices in hopes they will have similar luck.

Others hope they will be recalled to government jobs when the new fiscal year starts.

But some will go home, at least for the summer vacation.

Suit Charges Farmer, 84, Broke His Promise to Wed

ST. LOUIS.—Frederick Neustadt, 84, a great-grandfather and wealthy retired farmer, sat in circuit court with his hand cupped behind his ear to hear a 41-year-old mother of four children testify that he had broken a promise to marry her.

Neustadt, who has seven children, is defendant in a $25,000 breach of promise suit filed by Mrs. Marie Brady.

She said that he had rallied from pneumonia, when he was "nearly dying," because he wanted to ask her to marry him.

MADISON, WIS. — Detective William J. Taylor and Undersheriff Elmer Otum reported failure in the latest investigation into the disappearance of Georgia Jean Weckler, Fort Atkinson girl who has been missing since ef•rly in May. Taylor and Otum investigated a grave near Okee in Columbia county which reportedly had been dug by two transients. The grave contained only a dead dog.

Landowner Kills Judge and Self to End 15-Year Grudge

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C. — An elderly landowner who had carried a grudge for 15 years killed Superior Court Judge C. Everett Thompson, 65, and then committed suicide.

The slayer was George Pritchard, about 70, who, police said, considered all lawyers his enemies.

Thompson was killed as he sat reading with his wife in the living room of their home here.

Pritchard shot him from outside a window. He then shot himself in the stomach, dying a few minutes later.

Pritchard's grudge against Thompson and other Elizabeth City lawyers stemmed from a law suit 15 years ago over the title of some lands, police said.

Pritchard lost the case. Thompson was one of the attorneys opposing him.

Man Regains His Sight by Accident Two Years Later

PORTLAND.—Two years after an army airplane crash in New Guinea cost him the sight of his left eye, Joseph Hettwer lost the sight of his right eye when a piece of steel flew into it in an industrial plant.

Two accidents happening to Hettwer since apparently have restored his sight so that he can see enough to get around unaided and read large print. His right eye started functioning after he was hit by an automobile and fell down a flight of stairs.

Now 27, the red-headed veteran hopes to go back on his old job shortly.

Faded Red Suns Are Found by Sky Gazers

44,076 Are Classified After a 16-Year Study.

EVANSTON, ILL.—Concluding a 16-year study, Northwestern university astronomers reported that they have classified 44,076 faint red stars, or faded suns, which have radiated away tremendous quantities of energy and thus have lost luminosity.

Dr. Oliver J. Lee, director of Northwestern university's Dearborn observatory, said the survey was the most complete ever made of the faint red stars. Dr. Lee and his associates covered 54 per cent of the northern heavens, from 4.5 degrees below the equator to the north pole.

The astronomers used a powerful prismatic camera of 10½-inch aperture, mounted on the 18½-inch Dearborn telescope. They made two hour exposures on panchromatic, or red sensitive plates, photographing 317 separate areas of the heavens.

Another series of 317 plates was made after removal of the prism. These were used to measure the brightness of the stars.

Of the 44,076 faint red stars classified by the astronomers, 2,894 belong in what are called the advanced titanium oxide classes. Of these, 1,684 have apparent magnitudes brighter than 10, and only 1,210 are of magnitude 10 or fainter.

Sixth magnitude stars are the faintest which may be seen with the naked eye, and tenth magnitude bodies are 40 times fainter than those of the sixth magnitude.

"On the basis of our material," Dr. Lee said, "we conclude either that the titanium oxide molecule is especially abundant in our part of the Milky Way, or that man has appeared on the cosmic scene in an area when many stars in his vicinity are going through their titanium oxide stage."

Further atomic tests in Pacific are being studied.

Play safe, drive carefully.
